

Puppy Teething Timeline

A puppy grows two sets of teeth in about six months: 28 baby teeth by about six weeks, then up to 42 adult teeth, normally all in by about six months. The chewing and nipping peak while the adult teeth come through, so the log below tracks both.

THE TIMELINE (AGES ARE TYPICAL, NOT EXACT)

- About 3 weeks Baby teeth start coming in: the incisors and canines first, then the premolars. Puppies have no baby molars.
- About 6 weeks All 28 baby teeth are normally in.
- About 3 months Baby teeth start to fall out, and the first adult incisors (the front teeth) can appear.
- 3½–6 months Peak teething: sore gums, lots of chewing, and some bleeding as teeth fall out. Adult canines (fangs) come in around 5 months.
- 4–7 months The adult premolars and molars at the back of the mouth come in.
- About 6 months Normally every adult tooth is in (up to 42) and every baby tooth is gone; the back teeth can take until about 7 months.

CHEW TOYS FOR SORE GUMS

Yes

Toys with a little bend that you can dent with a fingernail; toys or treats frozen to soothe the gums; supervision every time.

No

Anything very hard (nylon, bones, antlers), which can fracture new teeth. Take away any toy that's breaking apart.

TEETHING & BITING LOG

DATE	TEETH LOST OR SEEN	BITING 0-5	WHAT HELPED	NOTES

Two teeth in one spot? That is usually a baby tooth that didn't fall out, most often in small and short-nosed breeds. See your vet: retained baby teeth need removing, and early removal helps the adult tooth settle into place. For nipping, teeth on skin end the game: go still or step away for 10–20 seconds, then offer a toy.
